Reports to
Chief of Staff (interim); Vice President, Programs and Strategy

Our Client
This new foundation builds and supports solutions at the intersection of climate change and community priorities, focusing on efforts and initiatives that draw connections between urgent local and community-based issues—including housing, transportation, food security, and more—and the health of our planet. The foundation is especially eager to partner with communities that are already enduring severe impacts of climate change and that deserve a central place in solutions. The organization prioritizes representation, diversity, equity, and inclusion in all facets of its work.

Unlike most philanthropies, this foundation will spend down its assets—more than $3 billion—over the next 10-15 years, a decision that empowers it to support not only sensible and pragmatic solutions but also daring bets and breakthroughs that can alter the trajectory of the climate crisis and unlock a new and better future for humanity.

This foundation strives to do things differently, to be entrepreneurial and innovative, and to be inclusive to a wide range of potential grant partners. The foundation’s Strategy team is responsible for mobilizing the organization’s philanthropic funding to create the greatest impact at the intersection of climate and community. In its operating model, however, this is not a traditional grantmaking team. The foundation does its work in deep collaboration with field experts and advisors, as it is essential that the foundation’s strategy is developed not in conference rooms but out in the world, informed by the lived experiences and innovative ideas of the people most directly impacted by the problems the foundation seeks to address. Specifically, the foundation will convene experts from a variety of disciplines who are close to communities—their experiences, and their solutions. Strategy Directors will translate their thinking into grant and impact opportunities.
Position Responsibilities
In order to execute against its ambitious goals, the foundation seeks to bring on two Strategy Directors. These new roles will work closely and collaboratively with the entire Strategy team. They will eventually report to the future Vice President of Strategy, once that role is filled. In the interim, they will report to the Chief of Staff.

More specifically, the Strategy Directors will:

- Work with experts who have been identified as leaders in the field – both to leverage their ideas, and tap into their networks
- Facilitate and support an ecosystem of community experts and advisors to develop new philanthropic strategies, programs, and grants
- Conduct research and landscape analysis in support of strategy development
- Lead due diligence on potential grants consistent with the foundation’s strategies, including conducting diligence meetings and calls, analyzing information, evaluating for alignment and success potential, summarizing findings, and writing grant recommendations
- Working closely with the foundation’s learning and evaluation function, helping to lift up strategies that are effective, and those that are not
- Provide support and connectivity to grant partners, including serving as their point of contact and proactively identifying new connections or collaboration opportunities
- Share learning and insights with the foundation team and community and the broader field
- Contribute to the success of the foundation as a whole; as a startup team with ambitious goals, all staff members will take on additional projects and responsibilities as needs or opportunities emerge

Profile of the Successful Candidate
To be successful, the Strategy Directors will need strong analytical and synthesis skills, combined with interpersonal skills that prioritize honest communication, integrity, the ability to thrive in a start-up environment, and the ability to translate complex issues into executable steps. An innovative, collaborative and facilitative approach to problem-solving will also be important.

Location is flexible within the United States. While a majority of the foundation’s team is based in the San Francisco Bay Area, the foundation is seeking the best candidates for its open roles no matter where in the United States they are based. That said, the foundation highly values in-person time for team building and collaboration. As such, team members not based in the area of the foundation’s eventual headquarters – most likely in the San Francisco Bay Area, New York City, or Washington, D.C. – will be expected to travel regularly (~25% of their working time) to the foundation’s headquarters. Team members will also be expected to travel for conferences, site visits, and so forth.

More specifically, the foundation seeks a professional who has:

- Passion for solving climate change and for meeting communities where they are and addressing their immediate needs and priorities
- 10 or more years of relevant experience building climate solutions and/or working with communities to respond to their priorities, ideally both
- Experience in at least one related field or system, such as energy, transportation, the built environment, food systems, policy advocacy, community organizing, or power building; however, the strongest candidates will be able – and excited – to work across all fields or systems
- Demonstrated commitment and effectiveness in incorporating diverse, frontline perspectives and considerations of equity into strategic decision-making
- Demonstrable skills and experience in working with prospective, current and past grantees in a respectful manner; this also includes the ability to help grantees develop compelling proposals, and in some cases, it may mean saying “no” in ways that are constructive
- Exceptional interpersonal and relationship building skills
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills
- Ability to synthesize research by experts with on-the-ground experience
- Good balance of creative and expansive thinking with decisiveness and execution
- Comfort in fast-moving, entrepreneurial, dynamic environments
- Ability to travel regularly
